

A LESSON IN HEALTHIER LEARNING

Case Study: Evergreen School; San Jose, CA

❖ SCORE AN A+ IN AIR QUALITY AND SUSTAINABILITY.

Record temperatures and budget-breaking fuel costs across the US have made the demand for cool, freshly filtered air a national imperative for our schools. And while lowering costs and reducing carbon footprint remain key priorities, there are other performance objectives at stake that prove even more essential.

Reports increasingly demonstrate how poor ventilation and air quality in classrooms can adversely affect our children's health, learning, and well-being. Yet, experience tells us that delivering more fresh air typically comes at significant added cost. However, in an independent study that equipped the Evergreen School in San Jose, CA, with our Seeley CW Hybrid solution — which provides fresh-filtered air at approximately three times the rate specified by standard code — filtered ventilation improved and the school saved over 50% in cooling costs. You can't argue with those scores.
